I was born in Athens and after I moved to Belgium. I studied philologies romanes, and philologies et hirtoire orientales. My Ph.D. dissertation deals with the issue of Arab Greek translations during the Middle Ages. I have worked for the Centre de Philosophie Arabe (Institut Supérieur de Philosophie), the Institut Orientaliste de l'Université Catholique de Louvain, the Fonds National de la Recherche Scientifique de Belgique, the "Le Museon" journal, which is specialized in philologies orientales, the European School I, all located in Belgium. In Greece I have worked for the Institut Français d'Athènes and in the private secondary level education. Since 1996, I am member of the teaching and research staff of Athens University, module 'Arabist: classical literature and civilization culture'.

Research interests and activities: Analysis of medieval texts, Translations of medieval texts, Transcultural studies, Lexicography (Arabic/Latin and Arabic/Greek), Literature and especially poetry

Distinctions:

1993: Prize from the Royal Academy of Sciences and Fine Arts of Belgium.

2007: Fagnan Prize (Muslim and Semitic Studies).
